

CONTENTS

Introduction	1
Executive Summary	1
Part 1: The Paradox of Busyness
1.1 Time pressured - but not increasingly time pressured	2
Chart 1: "I am often under time pressure in my everyday life"	2
1.2 Time is a luxury	2
Chart 2: "The best (or second best) description of luxury in people's lives"	2
1.3 Less time at work, more time for leisure	3
Chart 3: "Average UK working hours"	3
Part 2: Fragmented and Polychronous
2.1 The individual's fragmented day	4
Chart 4: "Individual experiences are fragmented"	4
2.2 Horizontal and Vertical time	4
Chart 5: "Horizontal and Vertical time"	4
2.3 Multi-tasking	5
Chart 6: "Simultaneous Internet use and TV/radio"	5
2.4 Doing Nothing	5
Chart 7: Time Use – What people mean by 'doing nothing'	5
2.5 25 Hour Society	6
Picture 1: From a 24 hour society to a 25 hour society?	6
2.6 Happy with Complexity	6
Chart 8: "I don't mind living with the increasing complexity of life"	6
Part 3: What, Where, Who With?
3.1 What we spend time doing	7
Chart 9: Time Use – The 'What'	7
3.2 Where we spend time	7
Chart 10: Time use – The 'Where'	7
3.3 Who we spend time with	8
Chart 11: Time Use – The 'Who With'	8
Part 4: Understanding the Busy Leisure Consumers
4.1 Busyness as a status symbol	9
Picture 2: "Busyness as a badge of honour?"	9
4.2 Eclectic Consumers	9
Chart 12: "Eclectic Consumers"	9
4.3 Voracious Consumers	10
Chart 13: "Voracious Consumers"	10
4.4 Voracious Time Use	10
Chart 14: "Voracious consumers' time and media use compared with the norm"	10
Part 5: Summary of the Implications
Chart 15: "The Stress Perception"	12
Chart 16: "One of the things I dread most is to be bored, or have nothing to do"	12